FOREMAN CRUSHED AND IS BURNED TO DEATH IN FOUNDRY

Thos. Quinn Victim of Horrible Accident in Scottdale Pipe Foundry.

THREE TONS OF METAL ON HIM

Six-ton Supposedly Due to Victim Slipping From Side of Immense Ladle Upon Which He Was Riding, Body Extricated by Two Workers.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTTDALE, July 30.—Thomas Quinn, foreman of the United States Cast Iron Pipe & Foundry Company's plant fell into a pit where the great 32-inch pipe was being cast yesterday. The fall crushed him, and then metal molten poured over him, causing death.

With 15 tons of molten iron, the tank and ladle were being moved into position for the pouring of a 15-ton-ton pipe, 72 in. in diameter, the biggest commercial cast iron pipe ever made. Quinn was riding one side of the monster ladle, while Philip Paula manned the other. With a wheel at each side the men directed the inclination of the ladle as it carried tons of molten metal, after up the pit and casting the pipe. When over the pit, Quinn fell from his side of the ladle. Some say the ladle was tilted, and others say that it slipped.

The ladle tilted, and over the inclining of the bottom of the pit, the burning stream fell. The flask melted after about three tons of metal had been spilled.

Alexander Brooks and James Butler went into the pit and extricated Quinn's body. It was bitten with repeated bites of the hot metal. The man's skull and nose had been crushed by the fall. It is considered probable he was stunned, and did not feel the molten metal. His clothing and shoes were burned off, and the body frightfully burned. The burns of his garments caused to have kept his body from being snuffed in fire.

Underaker William Cleggan took charge of the body. Quinn was buried about 36, and a local merchant has arranged to have the pipe mill for about two years, and before that, three years, to pay him, with a funeral expenses.

The deceased was a member of several lodges. He made his home with his brother-in-law, Henry Gillespie of North Broadview.

HOUSE ORDERS PROBE OF THE NEW ANTHRACITE WAGE SCALE

Representative Directs or Pennsylvania Urges Investigation of Operators.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Another investigation of the cost of living cost and into the wage paid miners in the anthracite region is provided under a resolution presented by Representative J. D. Gilmer, of Pennsylvania, which passed the House by unanimous consent.

In support of the new investigation, it is claimed that the miners when they agreed with the mine operators to a settlement of their recent strike, received an unsatisfactory increase of 10 per cent in their wages. When the new wage scale was adjusted the miners found they had surrendered a 10 per cent increase in their wages and that the total increase in wages amounted to but 6 per cent.

Without further notice other than that of a committee to the wage scale, the miners, the mine operators, and the advanced of the pits 25 per cent on certain proposed sizes of coal, it is understood that this advance by the operators should not be recognized. Under the resolution the investigation is to be made by the Bureau of Labor under the Department of Commerce and Labor.

W. M. HEADS TO COME

Broad's Officials to be Here at Opening of Freight Terminal.

Secretary Henry T. Head, of the New York Committee, received a letter this morning from President Alexander Johnson of the Western Steel and Coal Co., stating that Mr. Head and about eight other officials of the road will be in Connellsville this morning, the date of the inauguration of freight traffic on the new road between Connellsville and Chamberlain. Mr. Johnson did not name the names of the other officials who will be present on the part of the road, but stated how many there will be.

The railroad committee is anxious, or nervous, for it when the date of opening of the freight traffic will be known. They are awaiting news from the company in Pittsburgh. A heavy freight train is due to start with a part of the road to the west about 15 miles and a half.

USE OF PUMPS AT SUPERBA MINE MAY SHOW BODIES SOON

Additional Apparatus Installed by Company in Efforts to Recover Dead.

Hodges of the 14 miners who perished in the Potocet mine of the Superba Coal Company last Wednesday afternoon, may be recovered and brought to the surface in the next 10 days or two weeks, according to the prediction of the officials of the company.

With one steam pump in operation the water in the mine is being lowered approximately five inches every 12 hours. It is expected to have an electric pump in operation today. A second steam pump has been secured and will be installed at once. By the time the second is installed, probably Thursday, it is thought the water will be lowered sufficiently to place in operation a company pump in the mine.

The original estimate by the company was that it would require at least 60 days to reach the bodies but this was changed as above by A. G. Stuckel, president of the company, this morning.

Stuckel left at 10 o'clock this morning to look after affairs at the mine. George Foreman, W. A. Ginter yesterday evening outlined the work done at the mines and said that everything possible is being done to reach the bodies of the entombed men.

Ginter said that his hands, which were both torn in his efforts to rescue himself from the mine, are to this day swollen.

Relatives high mass will be celebrated by the Rev. R. P. Keenan in St. Paul's Roman Catholic church, Uniontown, tomorrow morning, for the miners who perished in the Potocet and Superba mines.

TOWNSHIP TO PROBE ACTION OF STATE IN ROAD MATTER

Supervisors' Secretary to Protest Concerning Uniontown-Greensburg Highway.

Following the failure of the State highway department to include the Greenvale-Uniontown highway, 400 feet of which had been graded in Connellsville township, in the list of roads for which bids have been asked, Supervisor J. D. Bamford, Connellsville township supervisor, will take the matter up with the department. He is meeting several days ago, that bids would be invited for the improvement of the latter part of this month.

The action of the county, Bamford said, has failed badly in the way of highway improvement under the Sprout law.

Forty-seven counties of Pennsylvania have, within the last year, requested State aid, under the Sprout law, in constructing permanent highways. Westmoreland leads the 17 in mileage covered in the application.

Total of 10 petitions have been filed by Beaver county leads in the number of applications and is second in mileage, there being 26 applications, covering 316,372 feet.

Twenty-one county filed 21 applications for State aid, covering 210,247 feet.

COURT SENTENCES JOHN HARRIS TO DEATH FOR MURDER

Judge Umbel at Uniontown, Sentences the Slayer of Thomas Jones.

SENT BACK TO COUNTY JAIL

Jurist in Solemn Charge, Appeals to Prisoner's Better Nature and Quotes From the Bible—Seen Most Solemn Since the Minney Case.

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, July 30.—Court was opened this morning by Judge R. L. Umbel, with Judge J. Q. Van Swart, Justice, beside him on the bench. Judge Umbel overruled a motion for a new trial in the case of John Harris, who was sentenced to hang for the murder of Thomas Jones at Ischola, May 13, 1908, seen to be the most solemn since the sentence of "Wilbur Minney" in 1906.

Judge Umbel, from the bench said: "In our opinion it is not possible for a human being to conceive a more serious condition than that in which you are at this moment standing before the bar of the Court of Justice, convicted of the highest crime known to man, law, murder. In the first degree, and we can very properly add that you are standing face to face with a never-ending eternity, and before the bar of the Court whose Judge is the Supreme Architect of the Universe, in whose decisions no mistakes are ever found, and from whose decree there is no appeal."

"A consideration of these serious and solemn circumstances leads us to feel and believe that we would be remiss in performing our duty if we did not call on you to change your attitude while there is time and you have the opportunity for the life to come, that eternal never-ending existence in comparison with which our lives here, even though we live our allotted three score years and ten, is but the breath of a moment."

"Under the evidence and facts, we feel justified and warranted in making the statement that unquestionably you have been a bad man and we cannot conclude other than it was only the hand of Providence that interceded and saved the life of the officers who so courageously and persistently pursued you in your flight after shooting your victim to his death. Your conduct and actions are conjecture evidence of a bad, wicked, depraved mind, and it is almost a miracle that the blood of some of your captors is not also on your hands."

"Notwithstanding all of which however, you will not be without hope. The whole law in this regard is summed up in the words of holy man of God as follows:

"If we confess our sins, God is just to forgive our sins and cleanse us from all iniquity."

Again—when the wicked man turns from his wickedness that he has committed, and doth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his own soul;

"And though he sin unto death, yet if he turn from his sin unto God, he shall find mercy."

"What is that? I don't understand."

Those in the court room then stood up, and the Court said: "The sentence of the Court is that you, John Harris, be taken hence to the jail of the County whence you came, and that you be taken thence at such time as the Executive Officer of the Commonwealth shall appoint to the place of execution, and that you be there and then hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may God in his infinite wisdom and goodness have mercy on your mortal soul."

BORE 85 FEET OF COAL BUT FAIL TO FIND LEMONT MINERS

Shift From No. 2 to No. 1 Mine, Cut by Rescue Party, Is Frantic.

Workmen early this morning, finished driving a shaft from Lemont No. 2 to Lemont No. 1 mine, which was flooded last Wednesday, and in which three miners lost their lives. The shaft was drilled through a solid block of coal 85 feet thick, and was done in record time. The passage was about large enough for a wheelbarrow to pass through. Two men worked at a time as rapidly as possible for 20 minutes, and were then relieved by another pair of workers. The shifts were kept up day and night.

The heading was made in the hope of finding the body of Steadon and Evans. The passage enables the men to get behind the water in the mine. Mine inspectors have declared that the damage wrought in the Lemont mine by the flood is equal almost to that caused in the Monongah mines by the explosion there a few years ago.

At present the main slope is practically clear as far back as the water, which is about 900 feet from the mouth of the pit. The tracks in the main slope were not greatly damaged. A large part of ballast was washed out. The greater amount of the water in the Lemont mine has been broken through the barrier into the Youngstown mine, which is flooded. Two large pumps have been running since the flood and the water in the mine has been lowered slightly. New pumps are being installed at Rankin, about three miles back of Lemont. The pumps will be turned on Saturday morning.

A number of other matters are to be taken up by Council tomorrow evening, the first meeting since the flood. The indebtedness of the town of present, said Durress Holing this morning, is about $10,000 or $12,000 and the limit of the borough indebtedness is about $20,000.

Dunbar may issue $10,000 in bonds to provide funds for repairs and for cleaning the debris caused by the flood of last Wednesday. The bond proposal has been under discussion since the latter part of last week and will be considered at a meeting of the Dunbar Council tomorrow evening.

1911 OIL OUTPUT GREATER BY 11,000,000 BARRELS

United States Geological Survey Declares Increase Due California Production.

Petroleum production in the United States in 1911 surpassed its own record made in 1910 by an increase of nearly 11,000,000 barrels. In 1910 the output was 209,617,245 barrels. The total production of the world also surpasses all previous records amounting to over 345,000,000 barrels, and of this the United States produced more than 63 per cent. The value of this enormous output of oil in the United States for 1911 was $134,044,752, the average price being 60.8 cents a barrel. This figure have been compiled by David T. Fair, the petroleum statistician of the United States Geological Survey, and have just been made public in a statement issued by the Survey. The increase for the year was caused principally by the gain in California, which was by far the largest producer. Its output being over 81,000,000 barrels. Another factor in the increase was the discovery of oil at Vinton, La., and the comparatively new Cade field in Louisiana also grew in importance. A fluid of high-grade oil at Electra, in northern Texas, was another notable event of the year.

Oklahoma, with a production of more than 50,000,000 barrels, extended its field well into Osage and Pawnee counties, and oil was discovered still farther west, in Kay County, considerably increasing the Mid-Continent field, however, were offset by the declines in Illinois and States further east; in short, all fuel oils increased and refinery oils declined. Another feature, the influence of which is being felt in 1912, was the increase in transporting and refining capacity, which in spite of the general increased yield of the country led to a drain on stocks in the Mid-Continent field and the result has been a general increase in the price of crude oils for refining.

With a gain in production of nearly 11,000,000 barrels and an increase in price at the end of the year, it is evident that an unusual condition in the oil market existed. The three commodities of general market value to be considered in connection with crude oils are gasoline, kerosene, and residuals, the last suitable for fuel in the West for lubricants and wax in the East. In the trade "naphtha" is the name generally applied to oil lighter than kerosene as distilled from crude oil, but by the public the fraction of the oil suitable for internal-combustion engines. In fact, when crude naphtha is redistilled it is for the most part separated as to yield gasoline and lighter or heavier kerosene. It is a matter of interest that the demand for gasoline has become so imperative that little or none is now allowed to lower the safety of lamp oils; the latter have therefore greatly improved in character.

In the production for 1911 California led off, with 81,134,221 barrels; Oklahoma took second place, with 58,094,637 barrels; Illinois was third with 10,720,429 barrels.

The prices of the different oils varied greatly, ranging from 47 cents to $1.32 a barrel.

Thus the production in Pennsylvania was only 824,153 barrels, its value was $10,491,073, whereas Louisiana, which produced 10,885,814, the greatest increases in production in 1911 were in California, $134,044,752 barrels; in Oklahoma, 58,094,637 barrels; Illinois was third with 10,720,429 barrels.

The great extension of the great Four Corner region of Montana and North Dakota, and embraces in Wyoming an area of about 15,000 square miles. Of this area at least 11,907 square miles are underlain by coal beds known to be more than 3 feet thick, and the remainder may in places contain beds thick enough to work.

Wyoming is the second largest coal-producing State in the Rocky Mountain region, Colorado ranking first; and production in Wyoming continues to increase, while in the next few years it is expected to double in the last 25 years.

The coal mined in Wyoming is bituminous and subbituminous. More than half of the product comes from the Kemmerer district, in Uinta county, and from the Rock Spring field, in Sweetwater county.

The Survey's estimate gives Wyoming credit for a larger original coal supply than any other State except North Dakota, which is estimated to have contained originally 500,000,000,000 short tons of coal.

The coal in North Dakota is lignite, but while the coal in Wyoming is either bituminous or semi-bituminous, Wyoming's supply is estimated to have been 424,005,000,000 short tons, compared with which the aggregate production to the close of 1910 (97,234,854 short tons) appears insignificant. The total exhaustion of the beds up to the close of 1910 amounted to 116,000,000 short tons or thirty-four thousandths of 1 per cent of the total estimated supply.

WYOMING'S COAL SUPPLY IS PERHAPS LARGEST IN UNION

United States Geological Survey Finds Half of State Bears Mineral.

The United States Geological Survey estimates the quantity of coal in the ground in Wyoming as exceeding that of any other State in the Union, with the possible exception of North Dakota. This great quantity is due in the first place, to the large number of coal-bearing formations in the State, second, to the great number and thickness of the coal beds, and third, to the size of the State being underlain by coal-bearing formations.

The largest coal field of the State is that of Powder river, which lies in the basin or trough between the Black Hills and the Highwood Mountains and extends from North Platte River to the Montana line. This field is the southern extension of the great Four Corner region of Montana and North Dakota, and embraces in Wyoming an area of about 15,000 square miles. Of this area at least 11,907 square miles are underlain by coal beds known to be more than 3 feet thick, and the remainder may in places contain beds thick enough to work.

BROKERS IN COKE AND IRON.

The Cleveland Daily Iron Trade Review, one of the leading iron trade organs of the country, heartily agrees with The Courier in the view that the merchant coke manufacturers would be better off without the coke broker and applies the same proposition to the furnace men. Commenting on the story of the break between the Connellsville operators and the brokers, published in The Courier last week, The Iron Trade Review says:

Every once in a while Connellsville coke producers have said out loud and clear that they want nothing to do with all brokers and to "go it alone." They have done this with all the regularity that certain merchant blast furnace owners of the middle west have made a similar threat. Both will be remembered, that these threats have usually been made when the coke or the pig iron market has been moving against the makers of those products. The outbreak against certain brokers, therefore, published in The Daily Iron Trade Review, as coming from the Connellsville coke producers and dealers, was not entirely unexpected ever since producers and furnace owners have been engaged in their price bataille on last half coke, which now appears to have been broken.

It is evident, however, that ultimately the organization of the Producers' Coke Company will have upon the market is problematical. Just at this time it has resulted in slightly lower prices being made upon contract coke. After all, the fact of organization and dealing in the regular price of coke quite as much as it has been doing in the case of pig iron for several years. The new company is designed to operate entirely as an exclusive selling agency for its members, or those who care to become its members, but others being considered. How at first this arrangement can be made will appear later.

There can be no doubt, however, that the actions of certain brokers, whose names have as yet appeared, have caused the coke producers much anguish. It need scarcely be added that those same brokers have also compensated a number of furnace owners in selling "short" or getting what they did not pay for, and thus mislead the furnace operators into believing that they would get coke at a certain figure. But when these "short" brokers failed to make good and deliver the coke which they had sold, then it was that the blast furnace men learned that they had been hoodwinked.

The "short" brokers, then, have subsequently been busy trying to cover for their requirements and in some cases at a considerably higher figure. Hence, these furnace operators for the time being at least will continue to do business with the furnace men who have been caught in the same treachery when, on entering the market themselves, they have been slipped in the face with some of their own pig iron which they had sold to brokers, and before at the then going market price.

Brokers are often very convenient when a man wants ready money for his product. They find as often happens a instance from the producer's standpoint. But all the evil is not confined to me.

It is true that this is not the first time that Connellsville operators have threatened to do business without the expensive assistance of the brokers, but at no time in recent years has this determination been more resolute or better backed. Former attempts have been High Treason rather than United Efforts. The present selling proposition does not pretend to isolate all the merchant operators. It is an monopoly, and it is not intended to be; but it is sufficiently powerful to furnish an impressive example to all, and to steady the market and prevent both short-sighted extravagant profits and lingering panic prices. Its effect on the market cannot, therefore, be very problematical. If it is to be continued, it is carefully carried out, it is doubtless will be the effect of the least sales agency, but be beneficial to everybody concerned.

There can be no greater action in industrial interests generally, than to practise the Golden Rule of Business, "Give and let live." Neither the coke operators nor the furnace men are getting enough for their products. They should work together to better their condition. In this prosperity period of the steel and iron industry, they have only themselves to blame if any are so much engrossed in these private quarrels as to fail to reap their fair share of the harvest.

The able organ of the pig iron interest makes it plain that it is the part of wisdom for the furnace men and the coke operators to make common cause against that disturbing, expensive and wholly unnecessary element known as the brokers. The position among brokers of Jimmie for pig iron has been to knock down the price of iron. If the furnace men and the coke operators will come closer together, by selling their own products and both holding their products at reasonable and profitable prices, there will be no further use for the brokers either as mere selling agents or real shysters.

AN UNCOVERED COMBINATION.

The attempt to indict certain Connellsville coke producers on a charge of having entered into a criminal conspiracy in restraint of trade, which attempt was suspected of having been inspired by the furnace interest, it now seems was a bare movement on the part of certain brokers, as an iron trade organ puts it, "not yet printed," who had sold large quantities of coke "short" and who were by reason of this alleged "combination" of operators unable to cover their contracts at the low prices named in their previous transactions.

There is some excuse for this recklessness, however. Brokers have hitherto been able, by reason of the lack of cohesion and cooperation among the Connellsville operators, to pretty nearly regulate the price of coke themselves. It would not be far from the mark to say that, whatever "combination in restraint of trade" may exist or may have existed in coke circles, will be searched for with better prospects of discovery among the coke brokers rather than among the coke manufacturers.

The Courier several years ago pointed out the fact that the broker was not worthy of his hire, and that as a matter of economy and efficiency the coke trade would be better off without him. The operators seem to have decided that the point is well taken.

The real combination in restraint of trade has as last been discovered.

STATESMANSHIP AND POLITICS.

The Congressional reports of the investigation of the Steel Corporation are so diversified and so indiscriminately critical as to create the suspicion that the Politicians are trying to fool the People again. Without attempting to discuss the voluminous testimony and the various summaries thereto contained in the reports, it may be said that the chief contention developed is:

1. Whether the best interests of all the people demand the dissolution or the regulation of large corporations;
2. Whether price-fixing at reasonable rates is or should be against the law.

There should not be any serious contention on the first point. The great work of building up this puissant nation was only possible through the aid of large combinations of capital in the form of corporations. Without them the country would have had few railroads and other public utilities and agencies of development, and the people would be enjoying few of the luxuries which they now regard as necessities. In short, the country would have been half a century behind the times, and perhaps a foreign dependency. The vast powers of corporate combination and corporation should doubtless be regulated in wisdom, but destroyed never.

Neither should there by any honest difference of opinion concerning the second proposition. Reasonable prices, however fixed, are fair prices, and fair prices should be lawful prices. There is just as much injustice in forcing a manufacturer into bankruptcy by cut-throat competition as in permitting him to enrich himself beyond the dreams of avance at the expense of the consumer. In either event the people have to pay.

How ever, there will be no legislation enacted this year, and after the election we will hope for more statesmanship and less politics.

Pennsylvania remains the pre-eminent coal-producing State of the Union.

Friendship was a lost village for some days, but it has been rediscovered.

The Lemont mine is said to be an example of the fact that fluid can be as destructive as fire underground as well as on the surface. Hence the importance of safeguarding against surface water.

The Ohio & Indiana railroad was nearly washed off the map.

The State has offered to give Eette county a post-graduate course in farming this winter, and the offer will doubtless be accepted with avidity. The prejudice against scientific farming is not so great as it once was, for the very excellent reason that scientific farming is no longer theoretical or book learning; it is that farming which produces the very best results, namely, intelligent farming.

It is true that this is not the first time that Connellsville operators have threatened to do business without the expensive assistance of the brokers, but at no time in recent years has this determination been more resolute or better backed. Former attempts have been High Treason rather than United Efforts.

The present selling proposition does not pretend to isolate all the merchant operators. It is an monopoly, and it is not intended to be; but it is sufficiently powerful to furnish an impressive example to all, and to steady the market and prevent both short-sighted extravagant profits and lingering panic prices. Its effect on the market cannot, therefore, be very problematical. If it is to be continued, it is carefully carried out, it is doubtless will be the effect of the least sales agency, but be beneficial to everybody concerned.

We believe in Connellsville. We believe in the people of Connellsville and we want the people of Connellsville to believe in us and in this store, because we hope to soon make this place Fayette County's largest and best department store.

Bargain Day, Wednesday, July 31st, this store will offer to the people of Connellsville and vicinity the greatest bargains ever heard of. NEVER BEFORE and you may NEVER AGAIN have such a grand opportunity to buy merchandise of character and quality at such ridiculous low prices. This store on Wednesday will be the chief point of interest in this city for two big reasons: (Firstly)—Because we have purchased the entire stock of the Feldstein-Levine Co.'s, at our own figure, and will for this day offer it at prices that will out do even our own previous record. (Second)—That we shall include our own stock at 40c to 60c on the dollars and less. Our aim is to dispose of every dollar's worth of the season's goods, before we start the remodeling and improvements for Fayette County's leading Department Store. Our aim is to get you acquainted with this store and its method of doing business. Make this store your shopping headquarters and a meeting place for your friends on that day. WE WANT YOU TO SHARE IN THIS WONDERFUL PROFIT-SAVING EVENT. Read every item below ONCE, TWICE and THREE TIMES. Every item is a trade winner and a friend maker.

Be Wise and Shop Early A few Additional Bargains Added to Our Full Page Ad of Thursday, July 25th.

Mrs Chedsoye was pale, and the artistic touch of rouge upon her cheeks did not disguise the pallor. The true evidence lay in the whiteness of her nose. Never in her varied life had she felt more helpless, more impotent. To be wild with rage, and yet to be powerless! That alertness of mind, that mental buoyancy, which had always given her the power to return a volley in kind, had deserted her. Moreover, she was distinctly alarmed. This little fool, with a turn of her hand, might send tottering into ruins the skilful planning of months.

"Are you in love with him?" aiming to gain time to regather her scattered thoughts.

"Love?" bitterly. "I am in a fine mood to love any one. My question, my question," vehemently; "my question!"

"I refuse absolutely to answer you!" Anger was first to reorganize his forces; and Mrs Chedsoye felt the heat of it run through her veins. But, oddly enough, it was anger directed toward the child than toward her own palpable folly and oversight.

"Then I shall leave you. I will go out into the world and earn my own bread and butter. Ah," a little brokenly, "if you had but given me a little kindness, you do not know how loyal I should have been to you! But no; I am and always have been the child that wasn't wanted."

The despair in the gesture that followed those words stirred the mother's calloused heart, moved it strangely, mysteriously. "My child!" she

"Certainly, You Are My Daughter," said impulsively, holding out her hands.

"No." Fortune drew back. "It is too late."

"Have it so. But you spent of going out into the world to earn your own bread and butter. What do you know about the world? What could you do? You have never done anything but read romantic novels and moon about in the flower-garden. Foolish chit! Harm Mr. Jones? Why? For what purpose? I have no more interest in him than if he were one of those mummies over in the museum. And I certainly meant to repay him. I should have done so if you hadn't taken the task upon your own broad shoulders. I am in a hurry. I am going out to Mont House to tea. I've let Celeste off for the day, so please unhook my waist and do not bother your head about Mr. Jones." She turned her back upon her daughter, quite confident that she had for the time suppressed the incipient rebellion. She heard Fortune crossing the room. "What are you doing?" suddenly to her burden. Better to know all too soon than too late."

That the note had not been directed to her and that she was totally unfamiliar with Ryenne's handwriting, escaped her. She had too many other things upon her mind to see all things clearly, especially such trifles. She finished her walk, returning by the way she had gone, gave the key to the lift-boy, and in her room dropped down upon the bed, dry-eyed and weary. The most eventful day she had ever known.

"Fortune, later you will be sorry for this spirit," she said, when she felt the tremor of wrath no longer in her throat.

Fortune turned a page, and jotted down some notes with a pencil. Sad as she was at heart, tragic as she knew the result of this outbreak to be, she could hardly repress a smile at the thought of her mother's discomfiture.

And so the chasm widened, and went on widening till the end of time. Mrs. Chedsoye was glad that the ball-maid knocked and came in just then. It at least saved her the ignominy of a retreat. She dressed, however, with the same deliberate care that she had always used. Nothing ever deranged her sense of proportion relative to her toilet, nothing found. George felt the loss keenly. He was not so rich that he could afford to lose both the rug and the thousand pounds he had paid for it. His first thought had been of Ryenne; but it was proved that Ryenne had not been in the hotel since morning; at least, no one had seen him.

George gloomed about. A beastly day, all told; everything had gone wrong, and all because he had over-slept. At dinner something was wrong with the soup; the fish was greasy; the roast was dry and stringy; the wine, full of pieces of cork. Out into the lounging-room again; and then the porter hurried over to him with a note from Ryenne. It stated briefly that it was vitally important for Mr. Jones to meet him at nine o'clock at the English-Bar in the Quarter-Rossetti. Any driver would show him the way. Mohamed-El-Gebel, the guardian of the Holy Yhordes, had turned up, and the band was beginning to play. Would Mr. Jones like a little fun by the wayside?

"I'm his man," said George. "But what devil did this Mahomed ever get into my room?"

Had fortune dined down-stairs instead of alone in her room, events might have turned out differently. Ryenne had really written to George, but not to Fortune.

Mahomed, fatalist that he was, had thrown everything upon the whirling scales of chance, and waited. Later, he may have congratulated himself upon his good luck. But it wasn't luck; it was the will of Allah that he, Mahomed, should contribute his slender share in working out the destinies of two young people.

"The play begins, Kate," whispered the Major. "This Huddy of ours is a wonderful chap."

"Poor fellow!"

"What? Huddy?"

"No; Percival. He'll be very uncomfortable in patent-leather pumps."

The Major laughed light-heartedly. "I suppose we might telegraph for reservation on the Ludwig."

"I shall pack at once. Fortune can find her way to Mentone from Naples. I am beginning to worry about that girl. She has a temper; and she is beginning to have some ideas."

"Marry her, marry her! How much longer must I preach that sermon? She's growing handsomer every day, too. Watch your laurels, Kate."

Mrs. Chedsoye inspected her rings. Meanwhile, George directed his driver to go post-haste to the English-Bar. That he found it more or less of a dive in nowise alarmed him. He had been in places of more doubtful aspect. As Ryenne had written him to make inquiries of the bermuda relative to finding him, he did so. She jerked her head toward the door at the rear. George went boldly to it, opened it, and stepped inside.

And vanished from the haunts of men.

Vitally Important to Meet Him at Nine O'Clock at the English-Bar, guardian from Bagdad has arrived and that there's likely to be some sport. I'm to meet him at a place called the English-Bar."

"The English-Bar?" The Major shook his head. "A low place, if I remember."

"And you are going dressed like that?" asked Mrs. Chedsoye.

"Haven't time to change." He excused himself and went in search of a carriage.

"The play begins, Kate," whispered the Major. "This Huddy of ours is a wonderful chap."

"Poor fellow!"

"What? Huddy?"

"No; Percival. He'll be very uncomfortable in patent-leather pumps."

The Major laughed light-heartedly. "I suppose we might telegraph for reservation on the Ludwig."

CHAPTER XII.

The Caravan in the Desert.

Yes, George vanished from the haunts of men as completely as if the Great Roc had dropped him into the Valley of Diamonds and left him there; and as nobody knows just and disinterested, under the folds of the tattered burhouse.

"Is he dead?" demanded Mahomed.

"No, my father. His head hit the wall."

"Hasten, then. Bind his feet and hands and cover his eyes and mouth. We have but little time."

There was a long way to go, and Mahomed was too wise and cautious to congratulate himself at this early stage. George was thereupon trussed up like a Christmas fowl ready for the oven. Then wrapped him up in the burhouse and carried him out to the closed carriage in waiting. No one in the street seemed curious. No one in the English-Bar deemed it necessary to be. Whatever happened in this resort had long been written in the book of fate. Had white man approached to inquire what was going on, Mahomed would have gravely whispered that it was a case of plague they were hurrying away to prevent interference by the English authorities.

Once George was snug inside the carriage, it was driven off at a run toward the tombs of the caliphs. As the roads were not the levellest, the vehicle went most of the way upon two wheels. Mahomed sat beside his victim, watchful and attentive. His intention was to take him no farther than the outskirts of the city, force him to send back to the hotel a duly credited messenger for the rug, after which he would turn George adrift, with the reasonable assurance that the young man would find some one to guide him back to the hotel. After a while he observed that George had recovered and was grimly fighting the imprisoning ropes.

"You will need your strength," interposed Mahomed gently. "If I take the cloth from your mouth, will you promise not to cry out?" There was an affirmative nod, and Mahomed untied the bandage. "Listen. I mean you no harm. If you will send to the hotel for the Holy Yhordes, you will be liberated the moment it is put into my hands."

"Go to the deuce!" snapped George, still dizzy. The fighting mood hadn't evaporated, by any means. "You know where it is better than I." So this was Mahomed?

"Fool!" cried the other, shaking George roughly.

"Easy there! I had the rug, but it was stolen this afternoon." He was very weak and tired. "And if I had it, I shouldn't give it to you," with renewed truculence; "and you may put that in your water-pipe and smoke it!"

Mahomed, no longer pacific, struck George violently upon the mouth. He, on his part, was unknighthly enough to attempt to sink his teeth in the brutal hand. Queer fancies fit through a man's head in times like this; for the ineffectually of the bite reminded him of Hallowe'en and the tubs with the bobbing apples. One thing was certain: he would kill this pagan the very first opportunity. Rather a startling metamorphosis in the character of a man whose life had been passed in the peaceful environs. And to kill him without the least compunction, too. To strike a man who couldn't help himself!

"Hey there!" he yelled. "Help for a white man!" After such treatment he considered it anything but dishonorable to break his parole. And where was Ryenne? "Help!"

Mahomed swung his arm round George's neck, and the third cry began with a gurgle and ended with a sigh. Deftly, the Arab rebandaged the prisoner's mouth. So be it. He had had his chance for freedom; now he should drink to the bottom of the bitter cup, along with the others. He had no real enemy against George; he was simply one of the pawns in the game he was playing. But now he saw that there was danger in liberating him. The other! Mahomed caressed his wiry beard. To subject him to the utmost mental agony; to break him physically, too; to pay him back pound for pence; to bruise, to hurt, to rack him, that was all Mahomed desired.

The Skin and Not the Blood.
Until recently it has been a generally accepted theory that eczema was a disease of the blood. Scientific investigations have taught us that eczema is positively a skin disease and curable through the skin alone. Meritol Eczema Remedy is applied directly to the diseased skin; the effect is marvelous and its results permanent. Do not delay trying Meritol Eczema Remedy.

Eckman's Alternative is being used with success in the treatment of Tuberculosis. Persons who have taken it improved gained weight, exhausting night sweats ceased, fever disappeared, and appetite recovered. If you are interested to know more about it, we will put you in touch with the author of the book, Dr. Griffith, Read of Mrs. Govett's recovery:

"Go to the deuce!" snapped George, still dizzy. The fighting mood hadn't evaporated, by any means. "You know where it is better than I." So this was Mahomed?

"Fool!" cried the other, shaking George roughly.

"Easy there! I had the rug, but it was stolen this afternoon." He was very weak and tired. "And if I had it, I shouldn't give it to you," with renewed truculence; "and you may put that in your water-pipe and smoke it!"

Mahomed, no longer pacific, struck George violently upon the mouth. He, on his part, was unknighthly enough to send for a bottle. Practically without hope, he recited every sin that he committed. His mother-in-law (Mrs. Anna Govett) might give some other sufferings. I hereby give the following testimonial: About one year ago, Mrs. Anna Govett, with chronic Pneumonia, and continually worse, requiring a trained nurse. ## SPEEDY SOUTH AFRICANS WHO TOOK FIRST AND SECOND PLACES IN MARATHON RACE

WINNERS OF THE 1912 MARATHON
COPYRIGHT 1912 BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

SPECIALLY McArthur, July 9—Here are Kennedy Kane McArthur and G. W. Gitshaw, the speedy South Africans who took first and second places in the Olympic Marathon. The picture was made just after the winner had been beaten with the official gavel and the two winners were being carried around the ring on the shoulders of the enthused crowd. Through McArthur came from South Africa he was born in Belfast, Ireland. He is six feet tall and weighs 163. In the Olympics he will run in the 110 yards low c-relay. He is thirty years old.
